

Synopses

One Line Synopsis

A young Indigenous superhero working for the Government uncovers a vast conspiracy behind the Australian post-human program and its connection with the mysterious death of his father.

One Paragraph Synopsis

After thwarting a terrorist threat at an Australia Day celebration, Kyle (Zero-Point) begins to uncover evidence of a government conspiracy regarding a classified post-human program and the origin of super-powers in Australia. Then, while confronting the ultra-nationalist terrorist known as Samson, Kyle discovers more about the mysterious death of his father, the original Zero-Point.

Longer Synopsis

The new age of superheroes began in 1979 with an explosion at the Maralinga Quantum Field Test Facility. Over the course of the next decades, a range of super-powered 'post-humans' appeared across the world. In order to curb the proliferation of post-human 'weapons', the United Nations signed a Post-Human Non-Aggression Treaty (PNT) forcing all post-humans to register themselves, and be recruited into official, Government-sanctioned teams. All post-humans who resisted the PNT were either arrested, went underground or disappeared. During this period, the original Zero-Point was killed in a battle with the Red Knight – a Soviet Union post-human.

Present day. All legal superheroes are Government operatives and all the flamboyant supervillains of yesterday have died, only to be replaced with terrorists. All legal superheroes are Government operatives and all supervillains have been labelled terrorists. Internationally, the American superman known as Adam Magnus fights the super-terror organisation known as the Sons of Azriel in the Middle East. In Australia, the Australian Federal Extra-Normal Civil Operatives, 'AFECO', are a tactical group made up of Government-sanctioned post-humans. KYLE BURTON - son of the original Zero-Point - is the newest member of AFECO, trying to find his place in the team as they battle a series of 'extra-normal' threats. After the Australia Day attack by the post-human terrorist Samson, Kyle begins to realise that he is not being told the full story about Australia's post-human history, including the untimely death of his father. He comes to decide that, with or without his team mates' support, he will find out the truth.

#